Motifs—SlowMotioned for You!

... some fine morning not a hundred years from now some enterprising fellow will discover the etymological history of the orthodox word examination and begin to change his wavering mind on the subject of the book [Finnegans Wake], whereupon one by one others will faintly echo in their wailful choir, 'Siccome i gru van cantando lor lai.'

Joyce's letter to Valéry Larbaud of 30 July 1929. The Italian quotation translates "as the cranes go chanting their lays," and is from Dante's Inferno Canto V, line 46. (Selected Letters 1975, p345)

In handling the FW motifs, Clive Hart essentialises. Semantically. What I do here is exactly the opposite, in the sense that I contextualise! Or rather, I re-contextualise. And often, I even go a step further, by giving more than just the absolutely minimal context. There are cases, for instance when dealing with "the first & the last" where I go as far as taking in the whole sentence itself.

The Middle 286 Motifs, from the Letter  ${\bf F}$  to the Letter  ${\bf P}$

For our job here is not merely to provide a so-called "methodology" of reading Finnegans Wake, but rather that of developing a fundamental HandBook leading, taken as a whole, to revealing, with luck, James Joyce's innermost secrets in constructing his FW texture. That texture is certainly layered: and we are here in the process of patiently exfoliating it. That has not been done systematically before—not in a strictly co-ordinated way, in the same series.

What I am doing now should perhaps have been done by Clive Hart himself half a century ago. It would have imposed his wise lexicographic approach to the FW text, at a time when there was a lot more enthusiasm in the air for it! What we get nowadays is a vast amount of salaried & tenured university teachers of various ages, plodding away for their yearly portion of buttered research. But the wave of FW enthusiasm that I could see in Nat Halper, Adaline Glasheen, Jim Atherton, or Jack Dalton (I had met them all in Paris in 1975!), seeming to have characterised the previous century, is dead and gone. It is largely replaced by peddling here and there a letter or two addressed to

http://editura.mttlc.ro

Stephen J. Joyce, instead of having them 'platonically' returned to their rightful, normal, logical, and obvious addressee.

ΨΨΨΨΨΨ

It is a pity that Adaline Glasheen in her day had a great number of more than brilliant ideas, coupled with near total lexicographic incompetence... (If you do not believe me, compare her 1977 work with that of 1978 Louis Mink...) And the odd contributors to A Wake NewsLitter were never given proper perhaps written — instructions by the Journal Editors as to how to make uniform, and more accurately standardise, their

http://editura.mttlc.ro

otherwise haywire lexicographic contributions! And also be given what set of abbreviations they would have been editorially permitted to resort to.

Working on Motifs, I slowly realize their vast importance: it was a real pity that next to nobody took them up, where Clive Hart had left off at the time! Even Roland McHugh was forced, by circumstances directly deriving from fundamental principles of redaction, to leave out their actual frequency of occurrence in his Annotations... especially in the extreme cases of Paternoster (36+ times), or O felix culpa! (24 times), or even mishe mishe to tauf tauf (54 times).

And O Hehir was on the wrong track, totally: He had been taking in far too much Classical and Irish linguistic information

http://editura.mttlc.ro

The Middle 286 Motifs, from the Letter  ${\bf F}$  to the Letter  ${\bf P}$

that James Joyce not only never knew himself, but also (or precisely 'because'?!) he never bothered about... When Joyce speaks about "orthodox etymology," in his letter to Valéry Larbaud, he most certainly was quite aware of what he was talking about... And that was not quite exactly the stuff displayed all over the place by Brendan O Hehir.

But let us move in another direction, and examine the opening of Clive Hart Madrid 1982 "Proclamation" in greater detail, and even slow-motion it too! In his Principle Number Two, he says textually:

CONTEMPORARY LITERATURE PRESS

"Behind every utterance in FW there lies, word for word, an utterance in plain English."

This is nowhere more clearly seen than in the Motifs, in the light of the correlation between the types and their corresponding FW tokens. And the only way to see and get convinced of that is "to read paradigmatically this present volume," and the two subsequent ones which will be its sequels.

Read paradigmatically! But also read slowly! It is only that way that you will manage to start slow-motioning the texture of FW. There are simple examples that can be given, and, on the other hand, there are some very complex, and even controversial, ones.

http://editura.mttlc.ro

Look for instance at (FW064.28:6) cherchez la femme! → ! Cherchons la flamme!

Joyce simply inserts the letter L within one of the lexical items of the wellknown French cliché! And what an extraordinary change he manages to obtain! In moving from the particular to the general, and from appearance to the essence! Aware of its major implication, he repeats it twice, thus generating a Hartian Motif...

Or take another instance, which is not exactly a motif –

http://editura.mttlc.ro

(FW314.27:8) mind the narrator but give the devil his so long

This is of the very-hard-nut-to-crack variety... which I leave it to the reader to disentangle... It is ultimately a problem of (semantic) reference.

But to do a proper analysis of it, one should write pages upon pages of argumentation... That is why, I will simply add that here The Devil is important! Consequently, I had put it in the very title of my book about Finneganese. The Devil is everywhere there. In all languages. "Va' fan!" is a central swear-word in the whole of Scandinavia, with a frequency of daily use of millions of

In the previous volumes, we have been trying very hard to get over a number of hurdles:

First, the Alien Languages: the German language, including the Zurichois of l'Ami Fritz, but also, and concurrently, familiar to Stephen J. Joyce himself, the only one of the Joyce family who is still with us. ( And for Old James Aloysius, family was ever so important. I am not wrong in saying "all-important"!)

Secondly, the Scandinavian pool of languages, as reflected in part in the work of Dounia Bunis Christiani.

Then, a bunch of the other Languages, including the Slavonic ones, with Russian getting ironically lost among its many lesser cousins!

http://editura.mttlc.ro

But perhaps the most important part was that of Alien English, as disentangled by Clive Hart in his imposing Concordance to Finnegans Wake (1963).

There followed afterwards the [+ Alien ] Literatures, in volume 11, where the Irish almost got the better of the English, Commonwealth or no Commonwealth!

And now, at volume Twelve, there come the Clive Hart Motifs, which will, I'm afraid, cover three 300-page volumes in themselves.

Things have been so far inevitably left out, for a later stage: e. g. the whole of Mink<sub>1978</sub>, and the whole of Hodgart<sub>1959</sub>, as well as many other as important things, usually scattered in various scholarly magazines and scholarly periodicals. But they are sure to come in when the time comes. And that will soon happen.

ΨΨΨΨΨΨ

The Present Volumes deal with the 2012 taxonomy of Clive Hart's 1963 motifs, as follows, for they fall into several more or less acceptable classes:

- set-phrases:
- clichés:
- Latinisms:

Paternoster Paternoster

Paternoster

http://editura.mttlc.ro

The Middle 286 Motifs, from the Letter F to the Letter P

- Bible Quotations: Paternoster
  Religious-Ritual Phrases: Paternoster
  + open to further analysis: Paternoster
  + open to further analysis: Paternoster
- + open to further analysis: Paternoster

In other words, Paternoster is all of them in a nutshell: for Paternoster is a set-phrase, which is a cliché, which is a Latinism, which is a Bible Quotation (Matthew 6.9 !), which is a Religious-Ritual phrase, which may be a lot of other things besides! (That is why, I discussed it in full in the Appendix to this book, entitled 'The Joycean ArcheType'!)

http://editura.mttlc.ro

Or, To be a little more serious, let us resume the taxonomy with more down to earth, and consequently more didactic illustrations:

1. - set-phrases:	the seim anew	(12x)
2. - clichés:	at his wit's end	(4x)
3. - Latinisms:	in vino veritas	(6x)
4. - Bible Quotations:	fiat lux ( Genesis 1.3) (26x)
5. - Religious-Ritual Phrases:	Requiem aeternam dona eis (2x)
6. - Acronyms:	AMDG → A.M.I	D.G. (6x)
7 Onomatopoeia	Quoiquoiquoiquoi (5x)
8. - Modern-language

Foreignisms	Mannequin pisse	(9x)
9 Interjections:	And ho! Hey?	(3x)
10. -Irishisms:	Erin go bragh!	(6x)

These ten categories are mere groupings of didactic illustrations! Their number can be more or less either reduced or extended at will, depending on the didactic requirements of the moment.

For instance, one could ADD to the Taxonomy, one or two categories—such as, One-Word Motifs, or Enumeration Motifs:

11.- One-Word Motifs :	Why?	(3x)

The very last of them being the most thought-provoking, and leading to the title of a book on FW published as early as 1929 by Samuel Beckett himself. But one thing is worth emphasizing: recognising the Clive Hart leit-motifs is all-important for a good understanding of the story, or plot, or narrative, whichever way you want to call it. In a word, of the whole of the book called FW! So, there is only one way out: that of the fundamental requirement of a good Monte Carlo Casino five-star Porter! Just

http://editura.mttlc.ro

like the Porter in Macbeth, he is required as a sine qua non condition imposed by the very nature of his job to be able to recognise, and stop, just about two thousand different faces! Remember that Françoise Sagan—who wrote Bonjour tristesse (written & published in 1954, at age 18)—, and a compulsive gambler, had expressly asked the local authorities not to be allowed to enter the MC Casino any more, because she could either break the bank there, or more probably, break her own back, in the process!

In the same way, the conscientious reader of FW is supposed, when reading the book, not only to recognise about one thousand leit-motifs (out of a rough total of 3,377 FW tokens), but also to bear in mind their level of importance! That is, how important they might be, one in relation to another. And in relation to the economy of the whole book...

So, whether you want it or not, you better get cracking, and start learning—through repeated paradigmatic reading—all the thousands of motifs put in front of your eyes ever so kindly and elegantly by Clive Hart as early as fifty years ago! Do that, before you start calling yourself a Joyce scholar, good and proper!

But then, Clive Hart tells me himself, in one of his latest eMails, that the list, as it is, is still incomplete...

An ideal opportunity for you, dear reader, (as Charlottte Brontë was so fond of opening her very last chapter of Jane Eyre with, and James Joyce wholeheartedly hated her precisely for that...) an ideal opportunity for you, dear reader, I say, of Finnegans Wake, to discover a few new motifs!

The rule is so very simple: anything repeated twice over any stretch of FW text becomes a LeitMotif! Easy enough, is it not? Through repeated paradigmatic reading, this Lexicon, simply and gradually, tends to become a HandBook.

The Middle 286 Motifs, from the Letter  ${\bf F}$  to the Letter  ${\bf P}$

The practical application of Joyce's theory of correspondences is achieved by the skillfully varied organization of more than a thousand little leitmotivs<sup>1</sup>. Neither before nor since Finnegans Wake has the literary leitmotiv been used so consistently or to such brilliant effect. Before Joyce's very characteristic development of the technique can profitably be discussed, however, I must define just what leitmotiv is, as I understand the term, and how in general it may contribute to a work of literature. It is not my purpose to compare the uses to which Joyce put the leitmotiv with the methods employed by his predecessors, but some incidental mention of Mann, Proust and others is inevitable in any attempt to clarify Joyce's procedure. A comparative study of the history of the leitmotiv in literature would be an extremely valuable contribution to technical criticism, but the great exponents of the device have been unlucky in this respect. No extended study of the leitmotiv appears to exist and although there are a number of excellent special discussions, such as Dr. Peacock's Das Leitmotiv bei Thomas Mann<sup>2</sup>, the greater part of what has been published is scattered here and there as subsidiary matter in studies of wider scope. The general chapter on leitmotiv in Oskar Walzel's Das Wortkunstwerk<sup>3</sup> is sound and provocative but too short to come to grips with all that his subject implies. In view of the considerable importance of the leitmotiv in the work of at least three of the greatest writers of this century—Pound, Mann, Joyce—and its appearance in many places in the work of a large number of others—Zola, Djuna Barnes, Proust, for example this reticence on the part of the critics is a little surprising and it is to be hoped that the gap will be filled before long. It is, of course, impossible for me to cover the whole field here, even superficially, and I must restrict myself to matters strictly relevant to Joyce.

A comparative study might also be made of the relationship of Joyce's leitmotivs to those of Wagner and other composers. There are many obvious similarities: in Wagnerian opera the musical motif, often a fleeting phrase, is valuable not so much for its intrinsic content as for its structural and atmospheric functions; and in Finnegans Wake the verbal motif, no less often a barren enough phrase or trite rhythm, is of importance principally for the overtones and symbolic significance with which it can be charged as it moves from context to context. Beyond one or two comparisons with specific Wagnerian examples, however, I shall not venture here to relate Joyce further to his musical counterparts.

It has become a commonplace of criticism to point out that Joyce's work developed in a period that was conscious of a powerful tension between, on the one hand, the forces of fragmentation and, on the other, those arising from attempts to reimpose order on the fragments by arranging them into artificial patterns. When

http://editura.mttlc.ro

The Middle 286 Motifs, from the Letter F to the Letter P

literature becomes thus fragmented, leitmotiv is an almost inevitable source of reorganisation, as twentieth century writing seems to demonstrate. Joyce was certainly conscious very early in his career of the potentialities of the leitmotiv as a specialised technical device. Although he is nowhere reported to have used the term 'leitmotiv' himself, there are unmistakable signs at least as early as 'The Dead' of the deliberate use of verbal motifs for structural and tonal effects<sup>1</sup>, while in A Portrait and Ulysses, of course, they are employed with brilliant assurance and, some will say, perhaps a little facilely and pretentiously at times. Although, as I have said, the detail of Joyce's books is almost always derived from the recognisable external sources, he is, in major technical matters, always less derivative than one at first imagines. He did not, as did many of his contemporaries, combine the activities of author and critic and, though a great innovator, he was much less sophisticated in literary matters than such adulators as Eugene Jolas liked to believe. He was fully conscious of his own greatness—his wife, Nora, told Frank Budgen<sup>2</sup>: 'Ah, there's only one man he's got to get the better of now, and that's that Shakespeare!'-but the impression one gains from biographies, letters and conversation with his associates is of a man not wholly in touch with the main stream of English literature, past or present, and not wholly aware of his own relation to it. Indeed, he paid little attention to any but a few great names in literature and worked in an isolation that was not so much arrogant and self-willed as unconscious and naïve. As we learn with some surprise, he had not read Carroll until he was well into Finnegans Wake, and then only because somebody had commented on the similarity<sup>1</sup>. It seems likely that he had never read some of the apparently obvious literary and philosophical models for his work<sup>2</sup>, and circumspection is therefore necessary in assessing to what extent Joyce was conscious of his predecessors' use of leitmotiv. Fortunately a little circumstantial evidence is available. He was devoted to the opera and, although he did not like Wagner, he knew his work and was conversant with his technique<sup>3</sup>; he was at least conscious of the existence of Thomas Mann, since he names Der Zauberberg in Finnegans Wake (608.19); he had read some Proust and quotes several titles<sup>4</sup>. This evidence does not, it is true, amount to very much, but it is probably sufficient to show that at least Joyce did not think he had invented the leitmotiv, as he once thought he had invented Jabberwocky<sup>5</sup>. In any case, Joyce's debt to earlier models in this matter is probably no greater than his supposed debt to Edouard Dujardin with regard to the stream of consciousness, and that debt must be very small indeed. For better or for worse, Joyce worked out almost all his mature stylistic habits for himself and suffered only the most indirect influence from other writers.

The word Leitmotiv itself is of comparatively recent origin, having been coined by Hans von Wolzogen for specific application to the music of Wagner<sup>1</sup>. In the musical world Wagner is, of course, the chief exponent of the method, although it has sometimes been suggested that he himself derived the idea in his turn from earlier literary models. Despite the fact that it springs from a long list of antecedents, the leitmotiv proper, in the restricted sense in which I use the word below, is rare in literature before the present century. In embryonic form, however, as a constantly repeated verbal formula associated with persons, places and things, the recurrent motif is of course to be found in the formal literature of virtually all western civilisations. The Homeric epithets and formulae, the refrains and burdens in folk poetry and prayer are direct ancestors of the leitmotiv, and Mann himself was fond of saying that the technique can be traced at least as far back as Homer. The quasi-ritualistic repetition of key-phrases in narrative goes back even further, beyond the origins of writing. A large class of folktales is constructed around a constantly recurring line of dialogue. Such stories as 'Tom Tit Tot' (260.02), 'Rumpelstiltskin' (370.24) and all their many variants are the ultimate formal sources of Joyce's 'Prankquean' (21-3) and 'Norwegian Captain' (311-32) with their modulating 'riddle' motif.

The main requirement of a true leitmotiv is that it should, as its name implies, lead from point to point; it is, in fact, an essentially dynamic device. Reiteration alone is not enough to convert a phrase into a leitmotiv. Even Gertrude Stein, who, with the possible exception of Péguy, must be the greatest devotee of repetitiveness western literature has ever known, cannot raise pure repetition to the status of leitmotiv. Real leitmotiv entails a use of statement and restatement in such a way as to impel the reader to relate part to part; each recurrence of such a motif derives in some necessary way from all its previous appearances and leads on to future resurgences, pointing to correspondences and relationships far beyond those that hold between the individual motif and its immediate context. The full course of such a motif, appearing and disappearing, now in full view, now faintly suggested, must be considered as a whole; like Mr. Brown's 'expanding symbols' every successful leitmotiv takes on a life of its own and continually enriches both itself and its contexts as it bears a mass of association from one appearance to another<sup>1</sup>. It will be apparent that an ostinato aside like 'Hurry up please it's time', in Mr. Eliot's The Waste Land, is not leitmotiv in the sense in which I am using the term, since it does not lead the reader from part to part, but-with however rich an irony-functions independently at each statement. Similarly, large-scale repetition of material from the main body of a work does not constitute leitmotiv. The repeated burden of a ballad, for example, which makes a verbal rondo out of narrative, has nothing to do with the leitmotiv because, even if the burden is varied, it leads nowhere but maintains a static relationship to the narrative themes. Leitmotiv, to be effective, must in fact grow functionally from the evolving material, yet not recur regularly in a wholly predictable way; it must arouse expectations of its reappearance and yet give new insights when it does recur; it must be a shaping influence, not the fulfilment of predetermined formal requirements; it must have an active, rather than a passive, function. The necessary qualities are much the same as those specified by Mr. Forster for 'rhythm'<sup>1</sup>:

'not to be there all the time like a pattern, but by its lovely waxing and waning to fill us with surprise and freshness and hope'.

Rather like one of Pavlov's dogs, the reader is gently conditioned to expect a motif when he is subjected to certain 'stimuli'. These stimuli may consist of narrative situations, configurations of symbols, thematic allusions, or the presence of other motifs. The process differs from physical conditioning, however, in that both stimulus and response must be constantly varied so that what began as a simple one-to-one relationship may expand into something richly and often mysteriously suggestive. It is just the dynamic flexibility and ever-increasing power of the leitmotiv to evoke and to widen its bounds that saves the technique from degenerating into a dry, profitless and mechanical memory-game. A leitmotiv must emphatically not comply with the definition offered by Mr. Robert Humphrey<sup>1</sup>: 'it may be defined as a recurring image, symbol, word, or phrase which carries a static association with a certain idea or theme.'

The most highly developed motifs in Finnegans Wake attain the maximum possible flexibility of content. Joyce creates, or borrows from popular lore, formal units with an easily recognisable shape or rhythm; into these empty shells he is able to pour almost any kind of content, just as a poetic stanza-form may be filled with virtually any words. As I have pointed out, popular sayings, clichés, proverbs and the like are wonderfully suited to Joyce's purposes in Finnegans Wake; all he need do is evoke a well-known rhythm in the reader's consciousness, after which he is free to use his word-play to superpose on that rhythm almost any desired nuance of sense. The rise and fall, the pain and joy of the characters, can be widely and subtly reflected in the changing surface and tone of such motifs. Their flexibility will have become apparent in the examples which I have already had occasion to quote.

Technically the leitmotiv is a highly self-conscious device. It functions primarily at the surface level, within the verbal texture. Clearly it does not commend itself to novelists who adopt a simple and self-effacing style, but it comes quite naturally from the pen of a Joyce. Thomas Mann, the most self-conscious of all exponents of the leitmotiv and the real architect of the fully developed literary motif, mixed it into a lucid, transparent, forward-moving narrative style. We are, as a result, constantly impelled to shift our attention from the subject-matter seen through the words to the words themselves, and while this change of focus can often be stimulating in theory, some readers find it, in practice, extremely distracting. No such distraction lies in the way of the reader of Finnegans Wake, in which surface-texture has become all-important. Within it nothing is artificial because all is frankly artifice, nothing is superficial because all is surface. The more clearly Joyce can focus our attention on the surface details of his style, the better we are able to appreciate his meaning. There is never any question of reading through the prose, which has been virtually engulfed by the leitmotiv technique. It is probably true to say that every paragraph in Finnegans Wake is both built up out of pieces drawn from elsewhere in the book and, conversely, capable of being broken down and related to all the diverse contexts from which those pieces came.

Of course the motifs in Finnegans Wake are not all equally functional or dynamic, and there are a considerable number which approximate to what Walzel calls the Visitenkartemotiv, or what Mr. Forster neatly designates a 'banner'1—although even in the case of Joyce's simplest adaptations of Homeric epithet and the catch-phrase of Dickensian caricature, he is rarely seen to wave two banners with precisely the same device. Exact duplication is in fact so comparatively rare in this book whose main concern is with modality, that the few examples which are to be found there stand out with particular emphasis; they may well have been used for just that reason.

Stephen Dedalus and the young Joyce, as we know from the notebooks<sup>1</sup>, set great store by static qualities in art. The perfectly poised static moment which made revelation possible was what Stephen called the 'epiphany'. Joyce never entirely abandoned this aesthetic theory, but in Finnegans Wake he assimilated it into a mature technique which goes far beyond the imaginative range of the early notebook jottings. Mrs. Glasheen's assertion that Theodore Spencer was talking nonsense when he stated that Joyce's successive works are all 'illustrations, intensifications and enlargements' of the theory of epiphanies<sup>2</sup> is not entirely justified for, mutatis mutandis, the best of the motifs in Finnegans Wake serve much the same type of function as do the epiphanies of the early books. Those epiphanies, though frequently effective enough in themselves, tended to halt all forward movement of the narrative, as every reader of Stephen Hero is aware; the leitmotivs of Finnegans Wake, an altogether more streamlined and supple equivalent, are true to their name and always lead the reader to further variations and relationships. Just as the individual static frames of a motion-picture are given life and movement when resolved on the cinema-screen, so each sequence of penetrating motif-statements is made to fuse into a dynamic image of reality. Even in isolation many of the longer motifs are triumphs of the epiphany technique. 'Vikingfather Sleeps' is an exposure of the total paralysis of Irish civilisation that would have won the harsh Stephen's astonished approval, while the development of the passage trough two major variants show how much further Joyce's later manner enables him to go in the analysis of an instant of revelation:

'Liverpoor? Sot a bit of it! His braynes coolt parritch, his pelt nassy, his heart's adrone, his bluidstreams acrawl, his puff but a piff, his extremeties extremely so: Fengless, Pawmbroke, Chilblaimend and Baldowl. Humph is in his doge. Words weigh no no more to him than raindrips to Rethfernhim. Which we all like. Rain. When we sleep. Drops. But wait until our sleeping. Drain. Sdops.'(74.18)

'Rivapool? Hod a brieck on it! But its piers eerie, its span spooky, its toll but a till, its parapets all peripateting. D'Oblong's by his by. Which we all pass. Tons. In our snoo. Znore. While we hickerwards the thicker. Schein. Schore.' (266.03)

The portentous question 'How are you today, my dark sir?'—the multilingual verbigeration<sup>1</sup> of a wrathful militant society demanding the abdication of the pacifist—and Piggot-Earwicker's misspelling of 'hesitency'<sup>2</sup>, though more fleeting motifs, are epiphanies of even wider significance.

Whereas Stephen would have built up art out of a sequence of such independent moments, the mature Joyce preferred to mobilise a limited number of them into running motifs, whose power of 'showing forth' would be vastly increased by their complex interweavings. This new technique is the product of Joyce's changing world-view. The compartmentalised units which he saw in his youth, the discrete images of lonely individuals, each of whose impenetrable faces he carefully and priggishly scrutinised in an attempt to 'pierce to the motive centre of its ugliness' (SH23), have become in Finnegans Wake a continuum where the identifying epiphany is no more than a momentary illusion, a play of light, still giving insight, but much broader in scope and capable of being shifted to a virtually inexhaustible variety of contexts without loss of power. The leitmotiv, one of the most flexible of all technical devices, is Joyce's most effective weapon in his struggle to leave individuation behind and create a truly generalised consciousness. To do this he had to abandon static art and come full circle back to kinesis; Stephen was obsessed with the problem of how to capture a 'still' from the motion-picture of life, whereas the later Joyce wanted to keep the camera of his 'allnights newseryreel'(489.35) turning with hardly a pause for meditation; he even went to the length of joining both ends of the film.

In discussing Ulysses, Mr. Robert Humphrey attempts to categorise the many motifs in that book as 'image, symbol, or word-phrase motifs'<sup>1</sup>. He suggests that Stephen's constant vision of his mother is an image-motif, Bloom's potato a symbol-motif, and 'met him pike hoses' a verbal motif, but all this is true only at the simplest referential level; ultimately, of course, all Mr. Humphrey's motifs are equally verbal, and Mr. Kenner did well to warn us that in reading Joyce we cannot be too insistent on the need to concentrate most of our immediate attention on the words instead of reading through them<sup>2</sup>. The point is no doubt a rather trite one, but interpretation of Ulysses has long been, and often still is, dogged by too naturalistic a reading of the text, which unduly plays down the linguistic level. In Ulysses Joyce has, it is true, often integrated his verbal motifs so skillfully into a naturalistic context that, to use his early terminology, they function dramatically; an illusion of independent existence is created for them. Such is the case with the 'Penrose' motif: when Bloom meets the pale young man and immediately afterwards remembers the name 'Penrose' (U170), the leitmotivistic connexion with the earlier passage in which he had vainly tried to recall the name is established by a process so psychologically real and compelling that the reader is, in the first delight at recognition, made to forget how simple a contrivance is involved. In Finnegans Wake Joyce abandoned such trompe l'ail methods altogether. Here the motifs are neither superimposed on, nor embedded in, anything but a matrix of other motifs and motiffragments; no motif can seem out of context in such company, though some will provide greater opportunities for organic development than others. The greatness of Joyce's art in Finnegans Wake lies in the brilliance with which he selects and juxtaposes groups of motifs to develop his materials in the best of a great many possible ways. While feeling his way toward this optimum thematic development Joyce seems to have made a practice of arbitrarily scattering a few motifs here and there in his text to serve as stimuli for his imagination. Such a motif, originally included more or less regardless of context, always becomes a source of inspiration to him. Like the grain in the oyster which grows into a pearl-blister, it is slowly encrusted with symbols, images, and overtones which diffuse into and finally become an essential part of the context<sup>1</sup>. The British Museum manuscripts indicate how very often this was Joyce's working method. It is worth noting, also, that, until Joyce had worked out the horizontal structure of his episodes, the motifs appeared only very thinly in the texts, and often not at all for long stretches. As soon as the basic fabric was clear in Joyce's mind the motifs began to develop abundantly, building up the harmonic structure and tying the sprawling cycles together with taut bonds stretched from point to point.

It is clear that in Finnegans Wake any such classification of motifs as Mr. Humphrey's is impossible from the start. The distinction between image and symbol, if it ever had any validity with respect to Joyce's earlier works, certainly has none here. Recurrent ideas appear now in one guise, now in another. Anna Livia may be seen as a woman, remembered as a dream-vision, heard in the ripple of the watery prose, suggested in the punctuation of a phrase. The only important distinctions now to be made have to do with function.

There are a great many ways in which leitmotivs may function to develop a book. They define character, give accents to the line of narrative development, control the rhythm of the structure and impose order on what may without them seem disorderly. A series of motifs, however slender, creates a skeletal grid-pattern which, provided it has some truly functional relationship to the book's themes, helps the reader to organise his responses in phase with those themes. Indeed, this ordering and unifying function of the leitmotiv is probably its greatest strength. I shall attempt in the following pages and in my final chapter to demonstrate some of the ways in which motifs serve to organise and unify Finnegans Wake.

By means of the leitmotivs and a host of key-words related to them Joyce constructs the several frames of reference which underline the scattered component parts of his artificial universe. These are the co-ordinates of his 'proteiform graph'(107.08) to which we may appeal to get our bearings whenever we are 'lost in the bush'(112.03). Usually a number of such referential grids are present simultaneously. Joyce's normal method is in fact to operate on three main planes at once: in the foreground is the manifest content of the episode in question, corresponding to the manifest content of a dream; in the middle-ground is a mass of highly symbolic, but often puzzling, material, scattered about like the stage-properties of a dramatic producer with an obsessional neurosis, and corresponding to the dream-symbols which are frequently incomprehensible until they are referred to the 'latent content'; in the background are the motif-controlled grids or frames of reference against which the symbols can function-often in widely divergent ways. The grids provide keys to the true latent content of the episode. 'Shem the Penman' (I.7) may be taken as a convenient example of this structural procedure. The surface content is a description of the habits and appearance of the 'bad boy' of the book writer, alchemist, outcast, black in skin and in mind, hated by his righteous brother and by the world. In the middle-ground is a tremendous array of symbolic flotsam and jetsam, at first apparently quite diverse, though almost all of a rather sinister nature. In the background are at least two main frames of reference by means of which all the foregoing can be rationalised: the first is the well known series of allusions to Joyce's own life which makes Shem a close personal analogue of Joyce himself and also reveals a hidden autobiographical significance in many of the symbols, while the second (which until now does not seem to have been noticed) is a full set of allusions to the fourteen stations of the cross; the latter gives point to the profusion of Golgothic imagery and retrieves it from its at first apparently aimless decorative function, while at the same time the Christ story helps develop both Shem and Joyce as forms of the murdered and resurrected god.

Thomas Mann had been able to achieve impressive pathos and suggest the machinations of fate with extraordinary vividness by suddenly reintroducing a motif which had originated long before in his narrative; similarly, by establishing the apparent inevitability of a motif's resurgence, he could create an atmosphere charged with foreboding. Past and future could be controlled at a distance with great power. Joyce's best motifs share such potentialities with those of Mann, but the very universality of Finnegans Wake makes the full deployment of their evocative and pathetic powers a difficult matter. In the works of Mann and Proust, as to some extent in those of Wagner, though the future lies somehow under the control of the leitmotiv, what this reflects and expresses above all is the mysterious and spiritual significance of the past; in Finnegans Wake, on the other hand, where past, present, and future tend to become undifferentiated, the recurrence of the motifs creates the effect of a cosmic simultaneity and immediacy of experience—the Eternal Now which I have discussed above. While Joyce undoubtedly gains thereby a breadth of context and an illusion of universality, his leitmotivs,

http://editura.mttlc.ro

București 2012

The Middle 286 Motifs, from the Letter F to the Letter P

caught up in a whirl of reincarnation, lack something of the inexorable finality that they have in, say, Siegfried. The best of Mann's and Wagner's motifs often serve to drive the plot forward with a strong pulse and, conversely, they themselves constantly gain in driving power from repeated immersion in the main stream of a strongly developing narrative. As examples of this kind of thing one might quote the deeply moving correspondences of the first and last parts of Tonio Kröger or the early foreshadowings of the 'Götterdämmerung' music in Das Ring. This source of forward-driving symbolic energy is largely denied to Joyce's motifs because of the weary round of cycles, which, however intense, are comic rather than tragic or pathetic; although things can never improve in the world of Finnegans Wake, they equally cannot grow any worse. Proust, of course, had already used correspondences to annihilate time; Joyce, with his re-entrant time sphere, improves on this: he retains time and yet holds it wholly within his grasp, so managing to have the best of both worlds. Time is, was and will be, but there is only a certain amount of it, which we simply use over and over again. Each Age apes the preceding one so that the cycling motifs, which in Mann's hands represent a constant creative imitation, become instead in Finnegans Wake symbols of an amusing but oppressive repetitiveness:

'Mere man's mime: God has jest. The old order changeth and lasts like the first.'(489.09)

If Joyce's motifs are less dramatic than those of Mann and Wagner, they are even more highly charged with significant content. A representative example of the kind of symbolic condensation made possible by a Joycean leitmotiv is the closing phrase from Anna Livia Plurabelle: 'Beside the rivering waters of, hitherandthithering waters of. Night! (216.04)<sup>1</sup>. These words, in themselves suggestive enough perhaps, but not very remarkable, form an epitome of the whole chapter and bear the spirit of Anna with them whenever they appear. Not only are rippling water and darkness evoked, but also the tree and the stone and the two washerwomen of the immediate context. Hither and thither, a pair of opposites, represent Shem and Shaun. Since the phrase is the tail-end of a tale told of Anna Livia and the conclusion of the major cycle of Book I, it always implies, when it recurs, the end of one (female) cycle and the beginning of the next (male) cycle. The wording provides a clear connexion with the whole Great Cycle of Finnegans Wake, since 'rivering' echoes the 'riverrun' with which the book opens. Earlier we had met Anna in a highlighted passage 'by the waters of Babylon' (103.11) and hence this Biblical allusion is now faintly heard as a burden underlying 'Beside the rivering waters'. The motif therefore draws into those contexts into which it intrudes, overtones of captivity, exile, and whoredom. But its symbolic content is still not exhausted, since in Finnegans Wake the City-Dublin-is usually the male, HCE. The introduction of the female city of Babylon therefore relates the 'change-of-sex' theme<sup>2</sup>—already present in the conversion of the washerwomen into the sons, Shem and Shaun—to the parent figures Anna and HCE. As was Bloom in nightmarish nighttown, HCE the city is transmogrified into an unwilling whore and suffers many indignities in that role<sup>1</sup>. That Joyce is consciously using this potentiality of his motif may be demonstrated from another of its occurrences—that at 355.15-20. Here the motif is amalgamated with another from III.4<sup>2</sup> and is used to conclude the male word-battle of Butt and Taff, which forms a parallel to the dialogue of the two women in I.8. In this latter context Joyce makes the change of sex—from a male back to a female cycle—quite explicit:

'Nightclothesed, arooned, the conquerods sway. After their battle thy fair bosom.' (355.19)

For a writer who delights in indirection, one of the most fruitful potentialities of the leitmotiv is its capacity to bring off effects by remote control. Joyce was temperamentally inclined to like the idea of action at a distance by mysterious control. He was fond of manipulating people and events from behind the scenes, as the altogether extraordinary 'Sullivan affair'<sup>3</sup> makes clear. The distant 'Godlike Artist' was one of Joyce's early ideals which he never quite outgrew. There are several varieties of remote control exhibited in Finnegans Wake, some of which, such as the 'anastomosis' idea, I have already touched on. Most important of all is the way in which one part of the universe of Finnegans Wake can be modified and controlled, stopped and started, by the introduction of motifs from another part of some suitable point. These are the 'Strings in the earth and air' that Joyce takes such pleasure in pulling.<sup>1</sup> The sudden appearance of motifs from the end of I.8 in the children's bedroom scene (572) will serve as an example. At 572.07 there begins a series of questions and exclamations:

- '-Wait!'
- '--What!'
- '-Her door!'
- '--Ope?'
- '-See!'
- '--What?'
- '--Careful.'
- '--Who?'

Taken in isolation, these words might not seem to echo anything else in Finnegans Wake, but a quite unmistakeable condensation of the concluding paragraph of I.8 in 572.16-17 points to a correspondence of the dialogue and the half-obscured questions and responses at 215-29 ff. The establishment of this correspondence induces the reader to attribute to these questions and exclamations (572.07-14) both a pace and a rhythm in harmony with the strongly suggested model. The whole passage is brought to a quiet full close in 572.17. These changes of tempo and tone are not inherent in the writing at this point in so far as it relates to the immediate context of the chapter; they are imposed on it by the controlling leitmotiv-complex in I.8 from which the passage draws only a small handful of verbal echoes. These echoes, though they amount to no more than three or four words, are nevertheless adequate to direct the whole scene. The 'salting' of a passage in this way with snatches from other contexts is of course not new in Finnegans Wake, but there is perhaps some originality in Joyce's courageously allowing the whole rhythmic unity and tone of a sequence to be dependent on such a small amount of introduced matter.

Apart from the very marked emphasis on the verbal level of the motifs, the methods I have been describing are not exclusively Joycean in character and, indeed, many writers have achieved comparable results with organised use of symbol and image. Having chosen the verbal motif as his unit, however, Joyce did find applications for it which made a definite contribution to the art of prose. Joyce shared Thomas Mann's preoccupation with the problem of how to make the spoken word function like music. In an attempt to approximate to the thematic structure of musical forms Mann had experimented with large verbal blocks built up from rich matrices of motifs, in which the serpentine alternations of symbol and theme would produce something like harmony and counterpoint. By going beyond conventional language in the 'Sirens' episode of

Ulysses Joyce achieved something which approximated even better to the desired effect, but always in these experiments Joyce failed to transform the Nacheinander into a true Nebeneinander. The closest approach to verbal counterpoint in Ulysses is the kind of syncopation by truncation exemplified in:

'First Lid, De, Cow, Ker, Doll, a fifth: Lidwell, Si Dedalus, Bob Cowley, Kernan and Big Ben Dollard.'(U276)

The same device is to be found in Finnegans Wake, though more skillfully handled. The following line from 222.06, for example, reads at first like a series of dactyls:

'góod for us áll for us áll for us all áll'

The preceding words, however, 'a chorale in canon', indicate that we are to read it as a series of telescoping stretti, thus:

The Middle 286 Motifs, from the Letter  ${\bf F}$  to the Letter  ${\bf P}$

This is, I suppose, quite amusing, but the simultaneity of statement is achieved by suggestion only. Elsewhere in Finnegans Wake, however, having created a polysemantic style which could sustain true counterpoint, Joyce was able to state motifs simultaneously in significant interwoven patterns which are probably as close an analogy to polyphonic music as any linguistic procedure may be. The simultaneous statement of two motifs is quite frequent in Finnegans Wake but it is a device which always presents considerable technical difficulties since the requirements are conflicting: the individual motifs must remain clearly identifiable, yet if the counterpoint is to function properly the marriage of the two must be as close as possible. Joyce is by no means always entirely successful in these experiments with counterpoint, but quite a good example is to be found at 355.15 where there is a major recurrence of the 'rivering' motif, which I have already discussed<sup>1</sup>. This is counterpointed against the 'rolling barrel' motif<sup>2</sup>, which is stated eight times (two four-part cycles) in III.4. Specifically, the first and last-and hence, according to the laws of Finnegans Wake, identical-versions of the barrel motif are quoted in combination, so that the binding together of the beginnings and ends of cycles is made even richer. The separate elements of the statement may be set out as follows:

(a) 'Beside the rivering waters of, hitherandthithering waters of. Night!' (216.04)

(b) 'While elvery stream winds seling on for to keep this barrel of bounty rolling and the nightmail afarfrom morning nears.' (565.30)

(c) 'While the queenbee he staggerhorned blesses her bliss for to feel her funnyman's functions Tag. Rumbling.' (590.27)

And in combination:

(abc) 'While the Hersy Hunt they harrow the hill for to rout them rollicking rogues from, rule those racketeer romps from, rein their rockery rides from. Rambling.'

'Nightclothesed, arooned, the conquerods sway'. (355.15)

Both ear and eye apprehend the two motifs of female ALP and male Shaun; this is true counterpoint. Mr. Melvin Friedman's cautious assertion that Finnegans Wake achieves counterpoint by implication only<sup>1</sup>, is accurate enough with regard to the less successful and less thouroughly digested parts of the book, such as the 'canon' quoted above, but when everything was functioning properly, as here, Joyce fully achieved his aim. The achievement of his technical analogy does not, of course, in itself add musical qualities to the text, but in bringing about an even closer association of symbols and ideas than is possible with normal linguistic usage, it lends words some of the immediacy and succinctness of musical expression. Oskar Walzel was careful not to confuse the two arts<sup>1</sup>:

'Das Leitmotiv fügt, soweit es inhaltlich deutet, nicht der dichterischen Form eine musikalische an, sondern es gibt dem Inhalt der Worte durch seine eigene Formung etwas hinzu.'

The symbolic content of all three component parts in the central amalgamation of motifs quoted above is made to interact in a very vital way: Night and Day, two opposites, are resolved in the somewhat surrealist image of huntsmen clad in their night-attire harrowing the hills in the morning, while the object of their hunt is identified as HCE, the stag in (c); the sexual overtones of (a) are reinforced by the clearly sexual significance of (c); the identification of Shaun's barrel with the floating coffin of Osiris is here emphasised by the association with the hearse (abc).

There remains one other highly important application of the leitmotiv in Finnegans Wake which must be mentioned. This is the technique of amassing motifs into a matrix or complex<sup>2</sup>. There are two main types of motif-agglomeration in Finnegans Wake. The first and simpler type is nothing more than a block of juxtaposed motifs and associated symbols—a further example of the Rabelaisian catalogue-technique to which Joyce was so inclined. Every so often Joyce virtually halts the forward movement of the narrative in order to build up a great pile of undiluted motifs, thematic statements, and symbols, which, to the weary reader trying to work his way straight through the book from cover to cover, come as a welcome, well-earned relief from his struggles with the sinuosities of Joyce's thought elsewhere. The longest of these resting places is the list of 389 attributes of Finn MacCool in I.6 (126-39). One might suspect, or fear, that the juxtaposition of individual items in these lists is of some obscure significance, but, although there is certainly much to admire in the wit and appositeness of each revealing little phrase, Joyce's working methods make it clear that the order of items is usually unimportant. So little attention did Joyce pay to their order that he allowed friends to insert his additions, giving them considerable freedom in the details of placement.

The following unpublished manuscript note is revelatory<sup>1</sup>: 'If possible please insert the following 5 sentences in D, beginning about 2 lines from top at regular intervals and ending about 2 lines from end, of course not breaking any phrase or group of phrases:'

By halting the narrative for a moment and filling the pause with such concentrations of motifs, Joyce is able to create a series of nodal points where the reader can contemplate the primary materials at his leisure; the essence of the book is refined off from the more impure discursive matter and is shown forth for a moment before the cycles begin again.

The second type of motif-agglomeration, and by far the more important, is the true interacting *leitmotiv*complex, of which the Letter is the most outstanding example. The complex of motifs, acting as a whole rather then as a collection of separate parts, is one of the most interesting aspects of the structure of Finnegans Wake. It is a technique which is on the whole used sparingly, but it is all the more powerful for that. A complex allows motifs which have become highly charged from their previous—or, in the case of Finnegans Wake, their future contacts, to react with one another on a grand scale, and so create a harmony of idea, colour, and sound, which impressively heightens the symbolic power of all the constituent parts.

A good example of a rich leitmotiv-complex held together in a tight synthesis of tone, rhythm, and imagery, is the celebrated closing section of 'Anna Livia Plurabelle' to which I have already alluded several times (215-16). In the last two paragraphs of this chapter almost every phrase is a major motif. From their source here they spread either singly or in groups, and with varying degrees of wit and relevance, into almost all regions of the book. The themes with which they deal—the primary principle of historical recurrence and the alternation of unity and diversity—are raised in these quiet and simple statements far above the level of shaping forces to become meditative poetry of the highest order. The motifs seem to emanate as essences from the being of Anna Livia herself, from the slumbering City of Dublin, and from fern-covered Howth Head. After many long excursions through time and space , having churned up masses of trivia and quadrivia which all tell the same story in miniature, we rearrive at those opposed archetypal figures which generate every lesser manifestation.

The Middle 286 Motifs, from the Letter  ${\bf F}$  to the Letter  ${\bf P}$

There is virtually no limit to the number and variety of ways in which the multitude of leitmotivs in Finnegans Wake might be classified and arranged, for in breaking down the process of composition to the organisation of such wisps of phrases Joyce was clearly looking for the maximum possible flexibility of design. I made several attempts to classify the motifs listed here but the results never proved to be particularly useful. A simple alphabetical index is therefore offered, although in the case of a few big motif-complexes a separate grouped list is provided. Motifs based on proverbs, catch-phrases and the like are usually listed in their normalised forms.

With a few exceptions this index omits (1) all song-motifs<sup>1</sup>, and (2) all 'literary' motifs, i.e. quotations from works of literature<sup>2</sup>. Some single words function as independent leitmotivs and, of course, a large part of Finnegans Wake is made up of motif-fragments—words and syllables derived from important motifs but too fleeting in themselves to be called motif-statements. The index makes no attempt to list any but the most important single-word motifs and motif-fragments. Similarly, I have excluded the hosts of words and symbols that always hunt in couples but otherwise have no special leitmotivistic significance, such as 'holly and ivy'. Such words and word-pairs can most easily be traced with the aid of my Concordance<sup>1</sup>.

Some of the repeated common expressions which appear in the list may have little practical function as leitmotivs but since the motif-structure of the book is always of at least theoretical importance I have thought it best to include everything that could be said to have the shape of a leitmotiv. Nevertheless, I do not claim that, even with regard to major motifs, the index is in any way exhaustive. The list of items has grown almost week by week as my understanding of the text has deepened, but I am still a very long way from understanding all that Joyce put into Finnegans Wake and other readers will certainly have noticed many correspondences to which I have remained blind.

Doubtful references are placed in parentheses. Most of the motifs are self-explanatory in context but I have provided brief notes and references where it seems useful to do so. The significance of a number of the major motifs is obscure to me. In these cases I have added a note to that effect.

given here yesterday by Riccardo Scrivano and by Hana Jechova, I feel very tempted to paraphrase the name of Joyce not only as «Jamcs Labyrinth Joyce» and «James Daedalus Joyce», but also - especially in the light of Marie-France Tristan's «mythème du navigateur» this morning - «James Ulysses Joyce». Finally, and perhaps most usefully for me, he should also be «James Diavolo Joyce» - for I am thinking of a sentence uttered yesterday afternoon again when «Jehovah dit: 'Le Labyrinthe est le royaume du diable'!». In my opinion, if Joyce himself had been alive and had been here in this room, this statement would for sure have gone into the making of Finnegans Wake ... If it has not already!

Thirdly, as to The Method, I would like to point out that the way I am looking at the two texts - the mannerist & the Joycean - is not only complementary to the «Critères formels» and the theory of figures presented here the other day by Yves Giraud, but also, in a sense, analogous to the Kepler Approach of Fernand Hallyn of Gand.

The Joycean archetype3 - as I view it in this theory of archetypes - is intrinsically lexical. Hence, Clive Hart's repeated insistence on the semanteme* is absolutely correct. The other two varieties of archetypes are widely different: for the one propounded by C.G. Jung is at bottom conceptual, which accounts for his insistence on the ancients, particularly on Plato5, in the explaining of it, as well as psychological and psychoanalytical, of course; whereas the essence of what is advanced by Northorpe Frye (1950; 1957) is poetico-imagistic. The direct outcome of this statement is that, in dealing with the Joycean archetype, one is not so much in the area of poetics and of literary undertakings - be they creative or critical - but rather in the crucible where language is being forged. It is on this particular point that many critics went wrong, and took for poetics what was in its substance a question of pure language studies". This close connection with linguistics also accounts for the seeming overemphasis on exegesis which turns out to be the not uncommon bee in the average lexicographer's bonnet. For Joyce's primary job in Finnegans Wake is to convey meaning, even perhaps far above normal limits: and the researcher's primary job is, of course, to record it, first of all, in lexicographic form. Hence, a natural justification for the plethora of dictionaries and explications on the market in the first forty years of the work's existence. Thus, in the stage of analysis, synthesis is still a long way away.

To make things very clear from the very start therefore, positing the existence of a Joycean archetype does not at all mean to establish any association between Joyce's art and the theories of Carl G. Jung, or to suggest that in the genesis of Finnegans Wake there is a debt owed to Northorp Frye, however extraordinarily anachronistic that may sound. This discussion merely wishes to spell out the fact that (a) the Joycean archetype is lexical, and hence to be relegated to linguistics and language studies, (b) the Jungian archetype is primarily conceptual, and by its very genesis is relegated to psychology and psychoanalysis, and finally (c) the Frye-ite archetype is imagistic and is further carefully restricted to the territory of poetry and the assessment of poetry in verse (sic!).

Once this distinction is established with the neatness and accuracy characterizing, say, a British immigration officer, we can proceed to find out what interesting analogies there are to be set up among the three types. To begin with Jung, it must be pointed out from the start that he is – as has already been hinted at – very careful to point to the ancients as his forerunners:

(JUNG - 1972:9) In former times, despite some disenting opinion and the influence of Aristotle, it was not too difficult to understand Plato's conception of the idea as supraordinate and pre-existent to all phenomena. 'Archetype', far from being a modern term, was already in use before the time of St. Augustine, and was synonymous with 'Idea' in the Platonic usage. When the Corpus Hermeticum, which probably dates from the third century, describes God as / to archetypon fos/', the 'archetypal light', it expresses the idea that he is the prototype of all light; that is to say, pre-existent and supraordinate to the phenomenon of 'light'.

The typical 'Encyclopaedia' definition of the archetype is 'a term in psychology and literary criticism, meaning a pattern from which copies are made'<sup>8</sup>. In the case of Jung, the initial pattern, as can easily be inferred from the above quotation, is on the Plato's-idea side of the coin. Turning now to the reverse side of the same coin, which is literary criticism, the reference is not so much to primordial abstractions as to 'unifying' elements, such as images, heroes or even story patterns. Here is a typical way of denoting the phenomenon on the literary side, with particular reference to 'Blake's treatment of the archetype'<sup>9</sup>:

(FRYE - 1950:191) By an archetype I mean an element in a work of literature, whether a character, an image, a narrative formula, or an idea, which can be assimilated to a larger unifying category. The existence of such a category depends on the existence of a unified conception of art.<sup>10</sup>

The lexical archetype is here defined as the correlation between one string of words — in this case by Joyce in Finnegans Wake — employed expressly in order to recall another string of words from somewhere else (i.e. by

http://editura.mttlc.ro

The Middle 286 Motifs, from the Letter F to the Letter P

another author, e.g. Shakespeare or Samuel Butler, or from another book, e.g. The Book of the Dead, etc.). From an amateur's point of view, this process of correlation might be called 'allusion' – though the phenomenon is far more comprehensive and considerably more complex, for Joyce, particularly within the texture of Finnegans Wake does not merely 'allude' to something in the conventional sense of the word. The process is fundamentally different from a 'conversational' allusion or 'discoursive' allusion – be it to a concept, a naughty girl or a philosophical system. Jung's archetype is cerebrally evolved, essentially conceptual and profoundly psychological, even psychoanalytical. Northorpe Frye's archetype is basically imagistic, and as such exclusively poetic. Joyce's archetype, however, is fundamentally inherent to his language, in very much the sense in which Max Muller<sup>11</sup> in his lectures and in his books published too many years ago was considering all language – or rather in in language – to be at bottom metaphorical:

(MULLER - 1891:448) Metaphor is one of the most powerful engines in the construction of human speech, and without it we can hardly imagine how any language could have progressed beyond the simplest rudiments./.../No advance was possible in the intellectual life of man without metaphor. Most roots that have yet been discovered had originally a material meaning.

The only major difference is that, with Joyce, the phenomenon functions as a deliberate 'textural renvoi', not as an arbitrary or semi-arbitrary correlation. It is only by means of a digression that this distinction can be explained: when a native speaker of English makes use in casual discourse of the word window, he is in no way aware that in goes back to windes eage in Old English, which in its turn is a particularly vivid metaphor; in other words, the correlation is not only arbitrary, but extensive language change has made it semantically opaque. And even if an expert is aware professionally of this correlation, he may not wish to put it across to absolutely all his daily interlocutors without endangering his academic position.

In English, however, unlike most other languages, archetype indeed becomes a mannerism of daily – or weekly – written usage of the media. Here, for instance, are the archetypal tokens I happened to discover in a couple of major Sunday newspapers in London in mid-April 1983:

(1) «The Importance of Being Oscar» «RENVOI «The Importance of Being Earnest» (Play).

(2) «How Green Was My Washing» RENVOI «How Green Was My Valley» (Novel).

(3) «Close Encounters of the Friendly Kind» RENVOI «Close Encounters of the Third Kind» (Film).

(9) *Arms and the Man* RENVOL ONE (One of Bernard Shaw's plays), RENVOL Two (Opening word of Virgil's Aeneta).

Joyce, too, was very much aware of this «mannerism» of English prose when he handled the Beatitudes (cf Matthew 5:2-12) as the «British Beatitudes» (U(psses 14:556), or B-Attitudes, for short:

Beer, beef, business, bibles, bulldogs, battleships, buggery and bishops.

In fact, he did the same with The Apostles' Creed, which he paraphrased as «The Apostates' Creed» (Ulystes 14:556), and prefaced it, in its en bloc occurrence, by the sentence «The unfortunate yahoos believe it» (Ulysses 12:427):

They believe in rod, the scourger almighty, creator of hell upon earth and in Jacky Tar, the son of a gun, who was conceived of unholy boast, born of the fighting navy, suffered under rump and dozen, was scarified, flayed and curried, yelled like bloody hell, the third day he arcse again from the bed, steered into haven, sitteth on his beamend till further orders whence he shall come to drudge for a living and be paid.

Things in Finnegans Wake become far, far more complicated than the printed-page reality of Ulysses largely on account of highly umpredictible «distortions» in the conventional arrangement of letters.

If the average reader comes across the string of words (621.33:1.2.3.4.5) 'the weight of old fletch', he is expressly invited by Joyce to associate it culturally, though this should by no means be taken to be a highly intellectualized 'allusion' to the literary and fictional outlook of a reasonably modern British writer called Samuel Butler, in the way that a highbrow critic like T.S. Eliot might choose to allude to one or another of the metaphysical poets, while he is embarked on a discourse on the merits and demerits of a particular type of verse.

Allusion is either intellectual or purely conversational - as when one speaks of someone else's girl-friend's behaviour in that particular someone else's absence. Joyce's device is neither of these two, and is as organic to his language, or rather discourse, as Max Muller's metaphor is supposed to lie at the very basis of all language communication. In consequence, it is safe to assert that Joyce's archetypal tokens, like (162.35 - A king off duty and a jaw for ever! -), are more akin to the kennings of Anglo-Saxon poetry12 than to anything else. Even the Lewis Carroll analogies so often made by the critics are far more off the mark than the kenning hypothesis. For kennings are part and parcel of the very texture of that poetry in exactly the same way - and perhaps even more so - in which the lexical archetypes constitute the very texture of Finnegans Wake. To put it in slightly more technical terms, Joyce's archetype is purely semiotic, and as such it corresponds fully to Roman Jakobson's definition of the sign, when he says in untranslatable French that 'le signe est un renvoi13. If one is to proceed to a consistent semiotic analysis of constitutive elements, it is quite easy to discover a token and a type, a Signifiant Sa and a Signifié Sé, forming a process of semiosis. What is lacking, and what Joyce himself most certainly wanted to be lacking is in the first place the absolutely arbitrary character of the relation between Signifiant and Signifié14, and, in the second place, and even more importantly, the conventional nature of the relation, viz. its stability, something that Roman Jakobson would bring under his principle of invariance. For if one particular speaker calls something green in one particular instance, and indigo in another instance, and then, in the immediately subsequent instance he calls it carbon, to replace it by diamond the day after, all linguistic communication between humans does indeed go to the dogs. For we are supposed by God Almighty to call a spade a spade. Well, in Finnegans Wake Joyce chose - and that was a major deliberately chosen axiom - to exert again his sense of freedom (as he had done in personal life in selecting place of temporarily permanent residence) and prefer linguistic fluidity to linguistic stability, or invariance. Barnacle goose becomes a thing of beauty becomes the weight of old fletch becomes anything else without essentially affecting the semantic component of human communication - this is the essence of the Joycean archetype. His only major problem - and it was by no means an easy one - was how to preserve the 'renvoi' feature of the linguistic sign, by concurrently managing to eliminate at least a large amount of Sa-Sé stability. His answer was large scale interlanguage incorporation (just in order not to say borrowing), and the conveyance of huge amounts of cultural information by superimposing another, more remote, type on to a more immediately accessible type, usually operating at phrase level, in order to convey something which neither the remote type by itself, in the case alluded to just now 'A thing of beauty is a joy for ever', nor the immediate type by itself (which in our case was the linguistic items, taken separately, of the FW phrase) could satisfactorily convey on their own. What the theoretical status is of that entity to be conveyed is still very elusive. But it most certainly is a semantic component of the texture. And it is here suggested that the FW-specific carrier of a certain type of meaning is the archetype formula, such as Joyce devised it for the express purpose of his grand oeuvre, in the sense Roger Caillois (1948-1978:373) gives it. The Joycean archetype either radiates meaning, epiphany-like, or it doesn't. The unique thing about it, however, and that is what makes it so Joycean, is that a particular unit of archetypal meaning may dawn upon one, not on the first reading, not even on the fifth reading, but, all of a sudden, as a semantics-oriented brilliancy on the twentieth reading. And it is then the moment that the reader exclaims with delight 'Now it does make sense!', and even 'Now it all begins to make sense!'. Which literally means (628.15) 'The keys to. Given!'. This phenomenon applies ideally to both linguistic information and cultural information.

By way of digression it should be said that a case could be made in support of the fact that there are two types - two distinct types - of Joycean archetype, namely (a) the linguistic variety, and (b) the cultural variety. For whereas (a) requires a knowledge of the English language pure and simple, in other words, it merely requires the linguistic competence, as advanced by N. Chomsky (1965:5), the (b) variety is far more complex, for it requires in addition, and superimposed upon the former, a wide knowledge of literature, culture, religion, history, etc. If the frame were restricted to one nation only, then the again untranslatable French phrase 'langue et civilisation', so often used in French language-teaching situations, would be perfectly applicable to cover both the distinction and the correlation between (a) and (b). But the trouble is than Finnegans Wake is not restricted to one entity of 'civilisation' in that specifically French sense. Being pan-'civilisation', if that phrase were possible, the book makes everybody almost equally handicapped, or incompetent. For in addition to Chomsky's linguistic competence, one must also take into account the cultural competence. This is most firmly rejected by Chomsky in most of his writings, though quite encouraged by Dell Hymes (1971) under the label of 'communicative competence'. What Joyce requires of his readers of Finnegans Wake is, therefore, a pan-'civilisation' communicative competence. And that is not only accessible, but also democratic. For man should be an all-round man, this is for sure a neat Joycean philosophical bullet. The knowledge that he requires of the average reader takes an all-round man to have it. A reader reaction of the type 'Moby Dick - I never know whether it's the man or the whale!' is definitely out with anybody Joyce would have liked to see having a go at the texture of Finnegans Wake. It takes mere linguistic competence for anybody to disentangle (145.16 - contempt of courting) and nothing more. It would give no trouble to the Moby-Dick-undecidability person. Though he may begin to be in trouble even with such a straightforward token as (569.31 - two genitalmen of Veruno -), and it is certain that he or she is going to be completely at sea with (385.26 - in draughts of purest air serene). On the basis of such instantiations an easy case is being made for cultural competence v linguistic competence as well as for a linguistic archetype v a cultural archtype. The two phenomena do have a distinct and independent existence, but things are not so simple - they may become indeed very complex - when we take into account border-line cases, such as (145.28 - once upon a week)15, which strangely approximates Dylan Thomas's 'his room so noisy to my own', or even (453.20 - Once upon a drunk and a fairly good drunk it was) clearly require fairy-tale, or folklore, competence, which may be quite developed among totally unschooled country folk. Though some sort of folklore competence may be quite sufficient to unravel the first instance of semi-linguistic semi-cultural archetype, the latter instance is considerably more complex and posits a competence at second remove, by virtue of its pointing to the opening segment of Joyce's Portrait as well; this second-remove competence must cover in addition to the area of the author's literary productions also the area of the author's drinking against the archetypal background of Irish, Triestine, Zurich and Parisian opening hours.

So far I have restricted the discussion of (423.09) 'the idioglossary he invented' to the area which is so comfortable to mid-Atlantic research, and which might go by the name of 'la civilisation anglophone' - with Melville, and Shakespeare, and Keats, and Thomas Gray and what not, which certainly includes the folk-tale tradition. But we have just agreed that the idioglossary he invented is a pan-'civilisation' device, rather than a uni-'civilisation' one, and in this formula, we have also agreed, everybody is supposed to be almost equally handicapped in point of type of information. All this is clearly too heavy a semantic load in point of theoretical implications for the flimsy word allusion to carry, for things are not what they seem and I tend to suggest that full many a theoretical construct the deep unfathomed caves of oceans bear.

To include the linguistic archetype within the theoretical model that I propose here would be an unnecessary complication. I propose, therefore, merely for reasons of expediency, to restrict and considerably simplify the theory, rather than (385.10 - raise hell while the sin was shining). The modification proposed here is that linguistic information is going to be handled as nonarchetypal information (with all the dangers of oversimplification the solution may entail) and the notion of the Joycean archetype be restricted to cultural information only. Leaving linguistic-lexical archetype outside the scope of the archetype discussion is in the first place the outcome of a simplicity requirement imposed upon the theory, but it also presents great methodological advantages on account of the severe restrictions of space imposed on this study. Two problems arise in connection with this separation of linguistic from cultural information. The first one is that the distinction is very easy to establish in the case of modern languages, which go on being alive via the 'collective' competence of living individual speakers, whereas it is almost impossible to establish the distinction in the case of dead languages, like ancient Greek, Latin, and Sanskirt. In these languages, almost all lexical items are traceable to manifest occurrences in one text or another and as such eligible to the status of cultural archetypes. Quite aware of this dilemma the imposition of artificial simplicity of theory proves to be even more vulnerable. The second problem is in part an answer to the above decision: all linguistic information is left outside the scope of the Joycean archetype for the reason that it is not in any way traceable to a single and unique instance of actual performance (again in the sense given it by N. Chomsky - 1965:5), which must necessarily function as a 'stabilizer of the renvoi'. In other words, the Joycean archetype is - unlike its Jungian counterpart - purely linguistic and lexical; however, it is constituted culturally, and it is not at all part of the linguistic competence of any single individual16.

The succinct and operative way to conduct a convincing discussion of the Joycean archetype is via lists, charts and diagrams, once the phenomenon is well understood. And I have selected that particular option in order to go rather exhaustively through one of the most interesting varieties of the Joycean archetype, namely the Paternoster archetype. The discussion begins with an inventory of Paternoster tokens in the order of occurrence in the FW text. There are forty-six such occurrences so far identified in the whole of the book. This is indeed a fairly high rate of occurrence of a closed text, which is itself made up of about sixty words only. For the purpose of the analysis this text is not divided into the component words, but rather into phrasal segments, each of which in its turn functions as at least one archetype. Further, these segments are not established on the basis of any natural linguistic criteria, be they orthographic, syntactic, or derived from actual ritual processes of chanting the prayer aloud or silently; neither are they independent units of meaning in the proper sense of the word. These segments are directly derived from their identifiability properties as archetypes in the FW text: thus, Thy will is one such one, and (will) be done another, as the former is actually identified as such, and the latter usually incorporates part of the former in its tokens. The segments are all very typical instances of what is here defined as a communicative phenomenon far larger and more comprehensive than allusion. In the Inventory which follows, they are arranged in the order of occurrence in the book, location being indicated by mentioning not only the number of the page and the number of the line, but also giving the exact position in the line of the item or items under scrutiny. As in computer terminology this is called address, the term has been found useful and adopted as such. The other three charts attempt to provide an answer to the question 'What is the spread of this particular archetype over the text of the whole book?'. It goes without saying that one might expect that most of the tokens should be clustered in one particular section or area of the book, or at least be very unevenly distributed. In order to better examine that problem two kinds of distribution of the tokens are given in two different charts. There is, on the one hand, the distribution of the Paternoster tokens over the natural segments of Finnegans Wake, which are the seventeen subdivisions which the author himself imposed upon the book, but there is, on the other hand, the distribution of the same tokens over arbitrary segments of fifty pages.

Here first, however, is the text of the Lord's Prayer as it appears in an ordinary English Bible<sup>17</sup>:

(MATTHEW 6.9-13) Our Father which art in heaven, Hallowed be thy name. Thy kingdom come.

Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven.

Give us this day our daily bread.

And forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive them that trespass against us. And lead us not into temptation ,but deliver us from evil, for ever and ever. Amen.

To which one usually adds in a normal prayer situation

In the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost. Amen.

One of the most interesting things about this prayer is its punctuation and even paragraphing. A casual glance at the printed text shows that there are ever so many full-stops in places where I as a child applied a 'comma', having learnt the prayer from hear-say, and never having bothered to check it against an authorized printed version. Full-stops after name, come, heaven, bread – to refer to the first three paragraphs only – make it far easier for the analyst to segment it, in the way in which perhaps Joyce himself would have liked his reader to, and then passing on to the next and far more important stage, take each of these segments to stand for the whole. Pars pro toto, in other words. In this way, we are back to Roman Jakobson's Part/Whole Correlation (1962), and his theory of metonymy. In other words, one of the very first almost diabolical things that is expected of the reader prepared to approach the FW text is to require of him to be prepared to receive openly the idea of a Paternoster archetype, and then to have digested the linguistic substance of the Lord's Prayer so well, and in far more than one language, that the reader can chop it up, dissect it into still recognizable bits, and constantly receive it metonymically. Once the convention is somehow established that every little bit of it — even the syntactic parallelism generated by 'and ... and ... and ...' in the latter part of the prayer — stands symbolically, archetypally, metonymically, what you will, for the entire whole, for identifiability purposes at least, the textural device is there and the communicative purpose has been achieved. The reader is now very much in the position of Coleridge's Wedding-Guest, hypnotized into looking for bits and pieces absolutely everywhere. The jigsaw puzzle I find a vulgar analogy: it is rather like the 'glittering eye' of an Almighty — be he Black, or be he White —, holding him there in his quest for more and more and more meaning. And it is through this fixation upon it that meaning becomes a truly and genuinely diabolical instrument.

http://editura.mttlc.ro

But the Lord's Prayer in English is not enough, as I was just saying. There is need of the one in French for at least one instance, and of the one in German for at least five tokens. In the present stage of research, which is theoretical and demonstrative, rather than exhaustive and exegetic, I have refrained, primarily for reasons of space, from looking at the Lord's Prayer in its Latin, Italian, or Dutch versions (and perhaps even Irish too, why not?). But the point has been made. Here, by way of sample, is the French version; taken from a Bible at random on my shelf:

(MATTHIEU 6.9-13) Notre Père qui es aux cieux! Que ton nom soit sanctifié; que ton régne vienne; que ta volonté soit faite sur la terre comme au ciel. Donne-nous aujourd'hui notre pain quotidien; pardonne-nous nos offenses, comme nous aussi nous pardonnons à ceux qui nous ont offensés; ne nous induis pas en tentation mais delivre-nous du malin. Car c'est à toi qu'appartiennent, dans tous les siécles, le règne, la puissance et la gloire. Amen!

It is interesting to note that in this French edition of the Bible, which has nothing special about it, except that it is bound in Black, and goes back to 1910, and 1937, paragraphing has completely disappeared, and many of the periods are toned down to a semi-colon, which definitely enhances, alongside non-paragraphing, the run-on effect. Then two exclamation marks emerge out of the blue, and they are clearly there for theatrical effect, which is a good thing among good Catholics.

Our next task would be to begin to reduce this text to archetypeidentifiable segments, which, in the linguistic terminology adopted here are, in their turn, types. These types are materialized in the FW text in the shape of tokens. There is a very close correlation between type and token, because in order to be able to establish type boundary, each segment must be matched against an exhaustive inventory of tokens. As there are 46 tokens of the Paternoster archetype so far discovered, which certainly place it in the top five<sup>18</sup>, here first is an inventory in the order of occurrence, followed by two charts showing the distribution of the tokens first according to the seventeen natural segments of the book, and then according to arbitrary segments of 50 pages. Subsequently, there will be some comments linking the distribution over the FW text with that of the same tokens over the Paternoster text.

Cursorily examining the spread of the Paternoster archetype in these two charts, let us dismiss the former as, quite paradoxically, less relevant — though it is less arbitrary — than the latter.

Focusing now on the chart segmenting the book into arbitrary chunks of 50 pages each, there is one clear conclusion, which is absolutely valid for the first 250 pages, i.e. the first five segments:

(1) There is an invariable rate of four occurrences of the Paternoster archetype per every 50 pages.

It must be emphasized that this is a very astonishing conclusion regarding symmetry of spread, and it is indeed a stong argument in favour of a potential proposal that the Paternoster archetype might indeed function as one of the minor loose structures of the whole book. It is true that after Segment 6 this perfect symmetry of spread breaks down; perhaps genetic researchers might one day find an explanation in the Manuscripts for that phenomenon.

Segment 13, however, being exactly half the normal length, evinces the conventional frequency of half of four. Segment 11, too, rigorously observes the same conventional rate of four tokens per fifty pages. Rephrasing the initial conclusion then, one might state that -

(2) Out of 13 segments of 50 pages, seven of them, which is more than half, do show a very accurate symmetry of spread, stabilized at a steady four, of the Paternoster archetype. These seven segments are Nos. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 11, 13.

Let us now have a closer look at the remaining six segments. One of them - no. 8 - is eliminated from the start as containing no occurrence of the token, and we are left with five. There is again a striking regularity here: for one of them - No. 10 - shows exactly half the normal frequency, and two others - nos. 7 and 12 - show clear overgrowth approximating one-and-a-half to twice normal frequency (a maximum of eight instead of a normal four, in the case of Segment 12). In other words, the conclusion at this stage is that -

(3) Underpopulated segments roughly compensate overpopulated ones (Nos. 7 and 12). Taking these segments together, the frequency quotient for the whole bunch is 4.25, which is already .25 above the conventional frequency of four.

The Middle 286 Motifs, from the Letter F to the Letter P

Over these fused segments, symmetry of spread of the archetype is replaced by symmetry of occurrence of the archetype, with a frequency quotient slightly above normal. In this way, we are left with only one segment unaccounted for, and that is No. 6. One possible conclusion would be that a certain amount of asymmetry, particularly of the marginal kind (i.e. one or two in twelve out of step), is part and parcel of the symmetry<sup>19</sup>. My personal conclusion, however, is that Segments 6 and 8 ask for a closer scrutiny in search of this particular archetype before any definitive statement is made. It is perhaps worth pointing out that this exercise in archetypal frequency is not based on any systematic and exhaustive scanning of the whole text on my part, having this sole archetype in mind. What is being said here, therefore, is in the nature of a prediction. But it must be made before any subject-matter considerations are brought into the picture<sup>20</sup>.

As regards the spread of the tokens over the archetypal Paternoster text, the situation is very clear inded:

(4) There is no segment of the Lord's Prayer whatever – not even one conjunction and (though the exception is possibly but in 14.0, which is replaced by and) – that is not matched against at least one FW token. If the type/token ratio is investigated for the Paternoster text as a whole, the overall frequency quotient is 2.588.

In plain words, all in all, there are almost three tokens to one type. The minimum is, therefore, at one, the average is at three, and the upper limit is at 15 for the first two words of the Prayer, which in itself roughly accounts for 33 per cent of total number of tokens.

The symmetry of spread in the case of this text of 60 words, which is the Lord's Prayer is overwhelming. In a less restrictive frame of mind, the following chart could easily be rearranged in order to give each and every archetypal segment a minimum of two occurrences. The natural outcome would then be that each and every Paternoster segment becomes, on formal grounds, a leitmotiv in its own right (as there is a definitional constraint of a minimum of two imposed upon the motif)<sup>21</sup>; instead of one motif entity there would then be 17 different ones to cope with under one umbrella.

This symmetrical spread of something over the whole text makes that entity in itself cease to function as 'allusion', for allusions are essentially digressive nonce occurrences: equidistance is a feature of structure. Hence, the archetype.

The following chart can give the average FW reader sound training. If circular permutations are applied to it, a considerable number of Joycean paternosters could be obtained, to the absolute delight, I'm sure, of Mr Whose B. Dunn, who masterminded it.

burning a witch in the dark Middle Ages, down to the times of Urbain Grandier, was to have her say the Paternoster by rote and without help: if she refused, or if she made the slightest distortion or omission, which was not uncommon with old women prone to forgetfulness and exposed to a plethora of dialects, then she was sure to be confined to fast in fires on the spot and instantaneously. When I was small and at school I faintly remember children turning the sacramental into the banal or the vulgar; our common, very crude way of debasing verse was to insert the phrase 'without trousers' at the end of every line in any of the languages we could minimally master. The device worked particularly well with certain national anthems too: 'Pater noster utan byxor qui in caelis es utan byxor veniat regnum tuum utan byxor ... et ne induces nos in temptationem utan byxor ...'22. I remember only too well a brave little man who was ordered on his knees on broken nut-shells in a corner for two hours or so for having been too stentorial. My purpose here is to prove anecdotally that what James Joyce is doing with the Paternoster archetype is tantamount to a very serious offence in any normal communicative situation in church or at school. One of the dangerous consequences of the permissive attitude in Western civilization is that it demagnetizes axiological compasses into shrugs of indifference. But in Ayatollah contexts, the offence turns from opinion into hard fact, and becomes a grave hand-chopping reality. This is indeed what the use of the Paternoster in an à rebours diabolic function points to: it certainly annihilates 'prayer' impact, and might even go far beyond that.

Finnegans Wake Motifs II

The Middle 286 Motifs, from the Letter F to the Letter P

<sup>12</sup> For an ample discussion of kennings, SEE the Beowulf commentators in particular. However, it is only the translator of Beowulf into another language that must come to grips with all the aspects of the poetic and translation problems that kennings do actually pose. And it is within this context that the issue of the translatability of Finnegans Wake should be raised.

<sup>13</sup> SEE Roman JAKOBSON, 1974/1975, Coup d'oeil sur le dévelopement de la sémiotique, Studies in Semiotics, Bloomington: Indiana University Research Center in Language and Semiotic Sciences. This is in fact the text of the main report given at the First Congress of Semiotics, Milan, June 1974. It is published in French by Indiana University, not in English, mainly on account of the untranslatability of the definition of the sign.

<sup>15</sup> Along the same line of phrasal deconventionalization, SEE also (583.30 - At half past quick in the morning).

<sup>19</sup> The literature on the competence/performance issue is quite considerable. It started with Chomsky (1965), who borrowed the distinction from Saussure (1916) and modified the labels. The issue, however, has major implications for the study of poetic prose, as concepts devised for a competence model do not necessarily apply to a performance model. There is now a wide range of types of competence being discussed, from among which I would like to mention zero competence and poetic competence.

<sup>17</sup> A more refined treatment of the text of the Lord's Prayer in English, taking into account variations between, say, the Authorized Version and the Revised Version, might be quite interesting — as interesting as inter-language comparisons with Latin, Italian, etc. —, but it is not considered absolutely necessary here, as the major point that is being made is the very definition of the archetype in general and of the Paternoster archetype in particular, in close correlation with its distribution over the whole book, rather than a discussion of specifically controversial tokens.

<sup>18</sup> SEE An Index of Motifs in Finnegans Wake in Clive HART (1962/1971:211-247). SEE also Song References in Finnegans Wake in M.J.C. HODGART & M.P. WORTHINGTON (1959:85-171). Unfortunately, there is so far no analogous listing for 'literary sources' (i.e. with equal claims at completeness and systematic presentation) on the basis of which reliable frequency figures could be worked out. Motif 189 (mishe mishe to tauftauf) rates highest with 55 occurrences, followed by Motif 386 (Magazine Wall Motif) with 47. The nursery rhyme Humpty Dumpty rates highest among the Song, with 49 occurrences, followed closely by the Ballad of Finnegan's Wake with 45. Unless there are unexpected surprises from the insufficiently charted area of 'literary sources', the Paternoster archetype should come an easy fifth in point of frequency, after the above-mentioned four — two songs, two motifs.

<sup>19</sup> SEE Michael SCHAPIRO, 1976, Asymmetry, an inquiry into the linguistic structure of poetry, North-Holland, particularly Chapter II, entitled 'Symmetry, Asymmetry, and Parallelism, pp. 59-87, for a discussion of the correlation existing between these concepts.

<sup>20</sup> A replica of the same chart can easily be constructed, with arrows indicating all the statistical compensations suggested in the conclusions. It is not given here for lack of space. As to context, this analysis might be met with the objection that the 46 so-called 'allusions' should be viewed only and exclusively in their proper 'context'. One very neglected apsect of context with which I am very much concerned here is the idea of item distance. Assuming that (aT 1), (aT 2), and (aT 3) are the first three occurrences of the Paternoster archetype, made up of 7, 1 and 3 items respectively, in the following formula.

The Middle 286 Motifs, from the Letter F to the Letter P

(aT 1(::7)) (x) (aT 2(::1)) (y) (aT 3(::3)) (z) ...

the unknown quantities w, y, and z stand here for aspects of context.

<sup>21</sup> For a thorough-going discussion of motifs, SEE Clive HART (1962:passim) from which I would like to foreground the following statement (162) in particular: 'Technically the leitmotiv is a highly self-conscious device. It functions primarily at the surface level, within the verbal texture'. Thus a correlation is established between recurrent archetype and texture.
